From the dream of Constantine to the lynching of Hypatia. The Story of a “phenomenon” that has marked the humanity.

The relationship between power and society at the advent of the Christian era. The prohibitions and repression. The persecution and freedom of worship.

The Christianization conceived only as a system founded on the values of love and freedom. Paganism understood as free co-existence between different faiths. The role of the persecuted and the persecutor clearly distinct. Franco Cardini investigates these and other misunderstandings to restore a historical framework unraveled and honest, because the light of the past illuminates a present as never obscured by specious appeals to new and dangerous crusades and holy wars.

Franco Cardini is Professor of Medieval History and successful author, appreciated not only for his scientific studies, but also for his work as a storyteller, as a scriptwriter and for his literary articles.
