

Under the sky of Dante. An astrophysical and a humanist explore the stars in the Divine Comedy universe

The poetry of Dante is quilted of stars. His gaze to the sky, however, is not only the one of a poet, but of a passionate of astronomy, one of the highest scientific disciplines in the medieval world. An astrophysicist and a humanist, converse around the stars images in Dante's poetry, which still involves and moves readers, although the scientific reference system is totally changed.

ATTILIO FERRARI teaches Astronomy and Astrophysics at the University of Torino. He is director of the Interuniversity Consortium for the Physics of Space (CIFS).

DONATO PIROVANO teaches Italian Philology at the University of Torino. For the Salerno Editrice has published, Il dolce stil novo for the series of Sestante, (2014) and Poeti del Dolce stil novo for the series of Diamanti (2012).

pp. 120 | € 8,90

New books by great authors of our time, on subjects, figures, moments and aspects of the culture and history

astrolabio

Series directed by Enrico Malato