

What remains of Marx. Re-reading the Communist Manifesto.

Today are in place such a changes, requiring a historical understanding: geopolitical fractures, religious wars, global economics conflict, crisis of democracy. But the vast literature on “globalization”, declined in various disciplines, does not seem able to find a unitary criterion of interpretation of our world. Let us read Marx, suggests the author Giuseppe Vacca. Starting from the Manifesto, even with the help of ‘Gramsci lenses’, not to seek interpretations of the economic crisis, but to renew the most profitable lesson concerning the idea of politics and history.

Giuseppe Vacca is an Historian of political thought and president of the Gramsci Institute Foundation. Among his publications: Moriremo democristiani? Rome, 2013.

pp. 104

| € 8,90

New books by great authors of our time, on subjects, figures, moments and aspects of the culture and history

astrolabio

