MAKING PEACE

Winners and losers in Europe Since the end of the war to peace. A path to the achievement of civilization.

The story of "peace", not of the conflict and the analysis of the end of the war. This is the reversal of perspective that Sergio Valzania suggests to us. We discover that this is not a trivial path. On the contrary. Making peace is often much more difficult to declare a war, and sometimes affects the future in a deeper way.
From the vision of peace belonged to classical Greece, for which it represented a situation of equilibrium in a context of ongoing rivalry between the poleis, at the Washington Conference of 1921. Through this brief history of Europe, the author shows us how to make peace is not an empty moment between a war and the other, but requires an higher commitment and awareness than the conflict.

Sergio Valzania is deputy director of Radio Rai (the Italian Public Broadcasting Company). He teaches at the University of Genova. For the Salerno Editrice has already published Rhetoric of War, 2002.
